Abstract: The aim of this study was to investigate the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological characteristics of young women. The study was conducted in a laboratory setting. The participants were 15 young women (mean age 20.5 ± 1.5 years) who were divided into two groups: a control group (n = 7) and a training group (n = 8). The training group followed a 12-week program of aerobic and resistance training. The control group did not participate in any training program. The physical characteristics measured were maximum oxygen consumption (VO₂max), maximum heart rate (HR_{max}), and maximum power output (P_{max}). The psychological characteristics measured were anxiety, depression, and self-esteem. The results showed that the training group had significantly higher VO₂max, HR_{max}, and P_{max} values compared to the control group. Additionally, the training group had significantly lower anxiety and depression scores and higher self-esteem scores compared to the control group. These findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical and psychological characteristics of young women.
