Marketing research in modern business has developed to include more than just data analytics Today an emerging interest within scientific marketing researches is the movement away from consumer research toward the use of direct neuroscientific approaches called neuromarketing For companies to be profitable they need to utilize the neuromarketing approach to understand how consumers view products and react to marketing both consciously and unconsciously Analyzing the Strategic Role of Neuromarketing and Consumer Neuroscience is a key reference source that provides relevant theoretical frameworks and the latest empirical research findings in the neuromarketing field While highlighting topics such as advertising technologies consumer behavior and digital marketing this publication explores cognitive practices and the methods of engaging customers on a neurological level This book is ideally designed for marketers advertisers product developers brand managers consumer behavior analysts consumer psychologists managers executives behaviorists business professionals neuroscientists academicians and students Financial Market Bubbles and Crashes Harold L.

Vogel, 2021-12-17 Economists broadly define financial asset price bubbles as episodes in which prices rise with notable rapidity and depart from historically established asset valuation multiples and relationships Financial economists have for decades attempted to study and interpret bubbles through the prisms of rational expectations efficient markets equilibrium arbitrage and capital asset pricing models but they have not made much if any progress toward a consistent and reliable theory that explains how and why bubbles and crashes evolve and are defined measured and compared This book develops a new and different approach that is based on the central notion that bubbles and crashes reflect urgent short side rationing which means that as such extreme conditions unfold considerations of quantities owned or not owned begin to displace considerations of price The Neuro-Consumer Anne-Sophie Bayle-Tourtoulou, Michel Badoc, 2020-04-24 Neuroscientific research shows that the great majority of purchase decisions are irrational and driven by subconscious mechanisms in our brains This is hugely disruptive to the rational logical arguments of traditional communication and marketing practices and we are just starting to understand how organizations must adapt their strategies This book explains the subconscious behavior of the neuro consumer and shows how major international companies are using these findings to cast light on their own consumers behavior Written in plain English for business and management readers with no scientific background it focuses on how to adapt marketing and communication to the subconscious and irrational behaviors of consumers the direct influence of the primary senses sight hearing smell taste touch on purchasing decisions and the perception of communications by customers brains implications for innovation packaging price retail environments and advertising the use of nudges and artifices to increase marketing and communication efficiency by making them neuro compatible with the brain s subconscious expectations the influence of social media and communities on consumers decisions when collective conscience is gradually replacing individual conscience and recommendation becomes more important than communication and the ethical limits and considerations that organizations must heed when following these principles Authored by two globally recognized leaders in business and neuroscience this book is an essential companion to marketers and brand strategists interested in neuroscience and vital reading for any advanced student or researcher in this area

Psychology of Technology V.K. Kool,Rita Agrawal,2016-12-23 This unique treatise expands on the philosophy of technology to argue for a psychology of technology based on the complex relationships between psychology biology and technology especially in the light of our relationships with our digital devices our online lives and our human experience Drawing from disciplines ranging from philosophy and evolution to cognition and neuroscience it examines myriad aspects of the brain s creative development the cognitive sensory and motor processes that enable technological progress and its resulting efficiencies and deficiencies along with our discomforts and pleasures These experiences are key to behavioral and affective processes in technology manifest in such diverse phenomena as multitasking the shift in tech design from ergonomics to hedonomics and the many types of online problem behaviors Through these rich pages readers can understand more deeply the history and future of human adjustment and adaptation in an environment intertwined with technology and with the ascendance of video games and virtual reality new conceptions of the human self Among the topics covered Could we have remained a tech devoid society Technology ergonomics and the non executive functions of our body New directions in brain computer interface From avatars and agents to virtual reality technology br On measuring affective responses to objects Psychology technology ethics and culture A timely lens on a field that will grow in importance as it shapes our existence Psychology of Technology will be read and discussed by not only psychologists social scientists and behavioral scientists but also by technology designers and developers and those in biotechnology Neuromarketing in India Tanusree Dutta,Manas Kumar Mandal,2018-06-27 How to understand human behaviour has been a very intriguing question to medicine computer science economics psychology and finance Each discipline has been trying to study and predict human behaviour through surveys laboratory based experiments questionnaires interviews statistics focus groups the list is endless The lack of precision in the existing techniques to predict human behaviour has motivated researchers to move beyond the traditional and search for new and improved techniques Neuroscience has stepped in to fill this gap It is based on the assumption that human behaviour is a complex process which has a neural basis and the locus of this process is the higher centre of the brain Both conscious and unconscious processing of stimulus in the brain is responsible for generating behaviour So if we could develop a deeper understanding of how the brain functions to generate behaviour we would be more confident in our understanding and prediction of consumer behaviour The use of neuroscientific techniques like functional Magnetic Resonance Imaging fMRI Electroencephalography EEG Evoked Response Potential ERP and sensors to measure changes in one's physiological state to understand the mind of the consumer has just begun and professionals in the field see a huge opportunity for neuromarketing in India. In the domain of neuromarketing one important question relates to the distinction between Indian and other global consumers of commercial products. Are we different from consumers across the globe? The answer is probably yes. This is documented by the fact that we find a distinct change in the marketing strategy of companies; the methods to influence Indian consumers are different from those adopted in other countries. This gives rise to the question: what makes us different? The next logical question that arises, assuming that we are different or similar, is: can we quantify it? Answering why, what, and how we are different marks the beginning of the book, followed by issues related to the ethicality of using such techniques to promote marketing risk analysis in case of failure and future directions in neuromarketing. The book intends to address each of these issues so that a comprehensive reading in the subject matter would help academicians to decipher consumer behaviour and build theory for possible principles of application in the market.

Biosurveillance in New Media Marketing Selena Nemorin, 2018-10-05 Advertising has long been considered a manipulator of minds and has increased significantly in coercive power since the emergence of research in behavioural psychology. Now, with the deployment of neurophysiological imaging technologies into market contexts, companies are turning to neuromarketing to measure how we think and feel. Data-driven models are being used to inform advertising strategies designed to trigger human action at a level beneath conscious awareness. This practice can be understood as a form of consumer biosurveillance, but what is behind the hype? What are the consequences? Biosurveillance in New Media Marketing is a critical reflection on the role that technology is playing in the construction of consumer representations and its encroachment into the internal lives of individuals and groups. It is a work that examines the relationship between neuromarketing practitioners and machines and how the discourses and practices emerging from this entanglement are influencing the way we make sense of the world.
