

The BLS Response to the Boskin Commission Report

John S. Greenlees¹
U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics

I HAVE BEEN ASKED TO PROVIDE the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) perspective on the Boskin Commission Report, and a description of its influence on the Consumer Price Index (CPI) program. I am a natural choice for this assignment because I was the chief of the CPI program during the period of the Commission's deliberations. In fact, I became Assistant Commissioner for Consumer Prices and Price Indexes on July 10, 1995, only two weeks after the Commission came into existence.

In this paper my focus will be on the arguments presented and the decisions made by the BLS during the Boskin Commission period. Although the paper makes many references to BLS documents and publications, it contains no review of the economic literature that formed the basis for the Commission's criticisms and recommendations. Thus, the large volume of theoretical and quantitative work on the CPI by Erwin Diewert, Jack Triplett, the individual Commission members themselves, and many others will go mostly unrecognized here. Moreover, I will make no attempt to characterize the present state of knowledge with respect to the issues raised by the Commission, nor will I present any official BLS position on the existence of upward bias in the CPI.

The context of the CPI in 1995

It is difficult to exaggerate the impact of the Boskin Commission on CPI day-to-day activities during and immediately following the Commission's deliberations. Although only a handful of formal meetings were held between the BLS and the Commission, there was extensive communication through email and telephone correspondence, and CPI staff responded to numerous information requests, especially from Zvi Griliches and Robert Gordon. The indirect effects on BLS activity were probably even greater than the direct interaction. Commissioner Katharine Abraham testified before several Congressional committees, and BLS conducted briefings for the press and public, for Congressional staff, and for Executive Branch officials. Meanwhile, numerous papers and reports were issued, either reporting the results of BLS research on "Boskin" issues² or presenting BLS views and action plans.³ Completely aside from any programmatic changes that resulted from this period, the Boskin Commission years called forth a great deal of analysis and clarification of the Bureau's goals and methods in producing the CPI.
