

What Was the Driving Force Behind European Imperialism in Africa?

Throughout the 19th and early 20th centuries, European nations sought to colonize, govern, and develop territories throughout most of Africa. But what drove this desire for the continent? In the 18th and 19th centuries, European nations pushed their way into the continent, not seeking political or economic gain. The 18th-century era was characterized by a series of wars, including the Seven Years' War, the Napoleonic Wars, and the First World War. These conflicts were driven by a desire for power and control, not by a desire for economic gain. The 19th-century era was characterized by a series of wars, including the Crimean War, the Boer War, and the First World War. These conflicts were driven by a desire for power and control, not by a desire for economic gain.
