The Leader's Guide to Unit Training Management (UTM)

Unit Training Management (UTM) is the process Army commanders, leaders and staffs use to plan-prepare-execute-assess unit training and identify the resources needed to accomplish that training. This manual is the extension of the Army's training doctrine as described in ADP 7-0 (Training Units and Developing Leaders) and ADRP 7-0 (Training Units and Developing Leaders). The concepts and processes in this manual are applicable to the Active Army, Army National Guard/Army National Guard of the United States, and United States Army Reserve unless otherwise indicated. It supersedes the Unit Training Management (UTM) manual dated August 2012.

PRINCIPLES OF TACTICAL COMBAT CASUALTY CARE

The principles of Tactical Combat Casualty Care are fundamentally different from those of traditional civilian trauma care where most medical providers and medics train. These differences are based on both the unique patterns and types of wounds that are suffered in combat and the tactical conditions medical personnel face in combat. Unique combat wounds and tactical conditions make it difficult to determine which intervention to perform at what time. Besides addressing a casualty's medical condition, responding medical personnel must also address the tactical problems faced while providing care in combat. A medically correct intervention at the wrong time may lead to further casualties. Put another way, good medicine may be a bad tactical decision which can get the rescuer and the casualty killed. To successfully navigate these issues, medical providers must have skills and training oriented to combat trauma care as opposed to civilian trauma care. The specifics of casualty care in the tactical setting will depend on the tactical situation, the injuries sustained by the casualty, the knowledge and skills of the first responder, and the medical equipment at hand. In contrast to a hospital Emergency Department setting where the patient IS the mission, on the battlefield care of casualties sustained is only PART of the mission. TCCC recognizes this fact and structures its guidelines to accomplish three primary goals:

1. Treat the casualty
2. Prevent additional casualties
3. Complete the mission

In thinking about the management of combat casualties, it is helpful to divide care into three distinct phases, each with its own characteristics and limitations.
