Some Like It Scot Pepper Basham, 2025-04-08 An American travel writer who has never found a place to belong and a reclusive Scot with a surprising secret find a shocking connection when she enters a Highlands manor house that has been turned into a three week long Edwardian experience Katie Campbell has traveled her entire life As the daughter of an army chaplain changing homes or even countries was commonplace so when her wild childhood storytelling turned into a lucrative career as a travel writer she thought she'd found her perfect match. But as she's nearly thirty with no real place to settle down she's starting to wonder where home actually is. Her own family hadn't felt like home since her sister's death left them all limping through life. When a lengthy project in Scotland promises to not only give her travel fodder for months but also a shot at a coveted editing position she accepts and is sent to spend three weeks in the newly created Craighill House, a Scottish home redesigned to offer guests an Edwardian experience. But her entrance to Craighill introduces her to a quirky group of characters and a surly Scot who is helping refurbish the magnificent woodwork of the estate house. As Katie attempts to live Edwardian she learns that all that glitters does not make a comfortable lifestyle and surly Scots may turn out to be dashing and creative uncles raising their orphaned nephews. When a few escapades from the Downton era lead Katie on hunts for mermaids and dragons or to a fireside chat with a family who has grown stronger through tragedy, Katie begins to wonder if home looks a whole lot like rolling green hills, magnificent braighs, and a few extra ayes thrown in for good measure. But can her world-traveling lifestyle fit in with a Scot whose heart is double-knotted to home?

Some Like It Scot Pepper Basham, 2025-11-26 An Award-Winning Author Travel writer and podcaster Katie Campbell has built a career as Miss Adventure. Offered a three-week Edwardian experience, Katie finds herself immersed in the beauty and eccentricity of Scotland. Graeme MacKerrow's comfort zone has always been family, and after his sister's death, he's even more determined to keep those he loves close. The sudden intrusion of a six-foot-one American lass was far from his plan. How could their very different worlds share the same page of life's story when home is in two different places? But maybe home and the future isn't what either one imagined it would be. Maybe home is less about a place and more about a person.

Some Like It Scot Donna Kauffman, 2010-06-01 There Goes The Bride She's cautious, careful, and about to lose control of her future to a marriage of inconvenience. So what can reluctant bride Katie McAuley do? Easy: let a modern-day prince charm her away for a month to his Scottish castle. There she can take refuge from her overbearing family and finally figure out what she really wants. But the more Katie sees of Graham McLeod, the harder it's getting to keep their arrangement strictly business. As McLeod clan leader, Graham had always placed duty to his heritage and people before everything else. Now with Katie as his betrothed, he's finally satisfied a ridiculously outdated Marriage Pact to wed a McAuley descendant, letting him focus on more pressing matters like preventing a ruthless relative's takeover of his home island. If he could just keep Katie's courage and honesty at arm's length, not to mention their all-too-sizzling attraction. Kauffman's characters are both sexy and intelligent. Romance Junkies! Their Scottish brogues and sexual prowess will tingle your spine and just make you feel good.
