

HAWTHORNE HIGH SCHOOL

CRYPTOLOGY

Information is power. Even before the first written word, the need to safeguard information created an ongoing evolutionary battle between codemakers and codebreakers.

Cryptology is the study of secret writing such as codes and ciphers. Beginning with early techniques for creating secret writing, such as the Caesar shift, monoalphabetic substitution, and the Vigenère cipher, students then move on to learn about modern techniques including digital encryption and RSA public key cryptography. Discussions about the vulnerabilities of each encryption system enable students to attack and decrypt messages using techniques such as frequency analysis and cribbing. Students apply what they learn to encrypt and decrypt their own secret writing.

Class Materials	Required Materials: • Binder for handouts • The Code Book – Simon Singh • lined paper	Recommended Materials: • Scientific or graphing calculator

Attendance and Assignments	Attendance is necessary to learn the material in this class. You are responsible for all notes and assignments you miss due to an absence, excused or unexcused. Most assignments will be completed during class time, however some will be assigned as homework. Many assignments will require partner or group work.
