Paranjpe,2013-04-17 As the world enters the new millennium mankind faces a series of new problems many of them created by man himself These include overpopulation air and water pollution global warming accumulation of greenhouse gases damage to the ozone layer and loss of biodiversity Perhaps these problems were around even earlier in an incipient stage but they have now assumed global proportions and are uppermost in the minds of all A natural consequence is enhanced interest in sciences connected with these problems Ecology is a field that is immensely useful in understanding many of them In the seventies nature conservation became a concern of wide sections of society well beyond the small group of expert ecologists Species extinction and depletion of biological resources were seen as major threats to human welfare It was therefore natural for scientists from different disciplines to seek reasons behind these developments We were no exceptions and when opportunity to interact with ecologists as statistical consultants came we found ourselves reading more and more of ecology and evolutionary biology Several years ago we proposed starting of an elective one semester course on statistical ecology for graduate students of statistics of Pune University Annals of Library Science and Documentation ,1965 Annual Report India. Research in Education ,1972 Economic Growth in India Pulapre Balakrishnan,2010-08-04 This study of economic growth in India is both an interpretation of its trajectory since 1950 and an evaluation of its prospects in the near future It is marked by theoretical integrity historical perspective thick description discriminating use of econometrics and definitive conclusions Commencing with a favourable appraisal of the growth record of early independent India and an account of how this advantage was lost the author proceeds to argue that by now it is more than just delayed liberalizing reforms that stand in the way of sustained double digit growth rates The prospects for high long term growth in India are instead linked to the progress in the areas of agriculture and education particularly schooling Further the author proposes that achieving inclusive growth currently high on the Indian government s agenda would be not merely politically rewarding but pivotal to maintaining the dynamism of the economy The possibility of such an outcome he shows is tied more to the state s capacity to govern our public institutions than to its command over resources To that extent the future of growth in India lies as much in the space of politics The Engineer ,1892 Solar Energy Update ,1986 The Publishers' Circular and
