Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume exercise program on the physical fitness of sedentary, middle-aged women. The program consisted of 30 minutes of walking, 3 times per week. The results showed that the program had a significant effect on the physical fitness of the women, as measured by the 6-minute walk test, the 12-minute walk test, and the 15-minute walk test. The program also had a significant effect on the women's heart rate, blood pressure, and body mass index. The program was well tolerated by the women, and they reported a significant improvement in their overall health and well-being. The results of this study suggest that a low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume exercise program can be an effective way to improve the physical fitness of sedentary, middle-aged women.
