People moved westward to claim the Louisiana Purchase and the Oregon Territory.

By 1847, nearly the entire United States was owned by the U.S. government. The first piece of land was acquired in 1803 when the U.S. took over the remaining land in the New Mexico Territory after the Mexican American War.

Once the land acquisition was complete, the United States government had to encourage settlers to move into the frontier territories. Cities were overcrowded, and there was no room for more people. Many people were afraid to move out west. Citizens were not sure if they would be able to make the journey and start new lives in uncharted territory.

To get people to move, the U.S. government passed the Homestead Act. This act granted free land to any citizen willing to move out west and farm the land for five years. The act allowed only people to build homes and own property when they had never had that option before.
