Blackburn, German Bou, 2017-01-17 According to the World Health Organization WHO in 2012 infectious diseases and related conditions account for more than 70% of premature deaths across 22 African countries and estimated 450 000 people worldwide developed multi drug resistant tuberculosis This alarming situation of great public health concern calls for the urgent development of novel and efficient responding strategies The employment of important research platforms such as genomics and proteomics has contributed significant insight into the mechanisms underlying microbial infection and microbe host interaction In this Frontiers Research Topic we aim to produce a timely and pertinent discussion regarding the current status of Proteomics of microbial Human pathogens and the role of proteomics in combating the challenges posed by microbial infection and indeed acquired anti microbial resistance As the field of proteomics progressed from 2 DE gel based approaches to modern LC MS MS based workflows remarkable advances have been reported in terms of data quantity and quality. Given the immediate and enormous advantages that high resolution and accurate mass spectrometers have brought to the field, proteomics has now evolved into a robust platform capable of generating large amounts of comprehensive data comparable to that reported previously in genomics studies. For example, detection of the complete yeast proteome has been reported, and other small proteomes such as those of bacteria are within reach. Mass spectrometry-based proteomics has become an essential tool for biologists and biochemists and is now considered by many as an essential component of modern structural biology. Additionally, the introduction of high resolution mass spectrometers has driven the development of various different strategies aimed at accurate quantification of absolute and relative amount of proteins of interest. Emerging targeted mass spectrometry methodologies such as Selected Reaction Monitoring (SRM), Parallel Reaction Monitoring (PRM), and SWATH are perhaps the latest breakthrough within the proteomics community. Indeed, through a label-free approach, targeted mass spectrometry offers an unequalled capability to characterize and quantify a specific set of proteins reproducibly in any biological sample. Usefully, Aebersold and colleagues have recently generated and validated a number of assays to quantify 97% of the 4,012 annotated Mycobacterium tuberculosis (Mtb) proteins by SRM. As such, the Mtb Proteome library represents a valuable experimental resource that will undoubtedly bring new insight to the complex life cycle of Mtb. Finally, as reviewed recently in Frontiers Research Topic, mass spectrometry-based proteomics has had a tremendous impact on our current understanding of post-translational modification (PTM) in bacteria, including the key role of PTMs during interaction of pathogenic bacteria and host interactions. We believe that our understanding of microbial human pathogens has benefited enormously from both 2-DE gel and modern LC-MS/MS-based proteomics. It is our wish to produce an integrated discussion surrounding this topic to highlight the existing synergy between these research fields. We envisage this Research Topic as a window to expert opinions and perspectives on the realistic practicalities of proteomics as an important tool to address healthcare problems caused by microbial pathogens.

From Prohibited Immigrants to Citizens Jonathan Klaaren, 2017. Jonathan Klaaren blends legal and social history in this engaging account of early conceptions of South African citizenship. He argues that distinctively South African notions of citizenship and nationality come out of the period 1897 to 1937 through legislation and official practices employing the key concept of prohibited immigrant and seeking to regulate the mobility of three population groups: African, Asian, and European. Further, he makes the case that the regulation and administration of immigrants from the Indian sub-continent in particular provided the basis for the vision and eventual reality of a unified, although structurally unequal, South African population. This book fits into the growing field of Mobility Studies, which seeks to understand and document the migration of people both within and across national borders while exploring the origins of those borders. In addition to nationality and citizenship, it touches on African pass laws, the origins of the Public Protector the scheme importing Chinese labour to the gold mines the development of internal bureaucratic legality and India South Africa intra imperial relations With its attention to the role of law in state building and its understanding of the central place of implementation and administrative law in migration policy this book offers a distinctive focus on the relationship between migration and citizenship Towards Consistency and Transparency in Academic Integrity Salim Razi,Irene Glendinning,Tomáš Foltýnek,2019 This book aims to be a forum for sharing best practices and experiences by addressing issues of academic integrity from a wide scope global perspective It is dealing with consistent and transparent approaches to issues of academic integrity from several perspectives Braby's Commercial Directory of Southern Africa ,1991 The Phone Book Telkom (Firm : South Africa),2007 Cambridge University Reporter University of Cambridge,1908 The University Address Book University of Minnesota,1912
