for its comprehensive approach combining statistical analysis with powerful survivor narratives to create a complete picture of this pervasive issue. The book progresses methodically through three main themes: global prevalence, patterns, survivor impact, and legal frameworks. It reveals how forced marriage intersects with broader issues such as poverty, educational access, and human trafficking while examining various forms of coercion from emotional manipulation to physical violence. Particularly compelling is its exploration of psychological impacts on survivors and the effectiveness of different intervention strategies across various cultural contexts. What makes this work especially valuable is its practical orientation, offering detailed guidance for professionals while maintaining scholarly rigor. The book bridges theory and practice by providing frameworks for policy development and community engagement strategies while addressing complex debates about cultural relativism versus universal human rights. Through case studies from regions including South Asia, Sub-Saharan Africa, and Western diaspora communities, it demonstrates how coordinated international response and strong legal frameworks are essential for combating this global challenge.

Strength to Say No Rekha Kalindi, 2016-07-20. The true story of one girl who said no to tradition and the effect it had upon a nation. In a remote village in Bengal, 11-year-old Rekha and her large family lived by rolling handmade cigarettes. She frequently observed the abrupt departure of her friends to go live with their mothers-in-law where they were often treated like slaves. In spite of her youth, Rekha was aware of the harm done to these little girls. When in their turn her parents found a husband for her, a man she didn't know, she flew into a blinding rage at the idea of being taken away from any further schooling for good. After that, Rekha went from village to village to tell her story and especially to explain the tragic consequences of early marriages. Thanks to her, several dozen children found the courage to say no to this tribal tradition. Her story gained national attention with India's newspaper hailing her for accomplishing change that the India government was incapable of making. Her exemplary journey gained her the recognition of the highest courts in the land; she has had an audience with the Indian President and she is a recipient of India's National Bravery Award. Written with the collaboration of Mouhssine Ennaïmi, a distinguished reporter for Radio France, The Strength to Say No translated from Ennaïmi's acclaimed French edition is a documentary portrait of one girl's monumental struggle.

Forced Marriage, 2009. This research paper focuses on UK resident children and young people under 18 years of age. A forced marriage is a marriage in which one or both spouses do not or, in the case of some vulnerable adults, cannot consent to the marriage and duress is involved. The majority of FMs involve a young female victim, but young men can also be victims. Around one-third of the cases handled by the FMU involve children under 18 years of age. This research paper reports on the findings of a Government study that aimed to improve the understanding of the prevalence of forced marriages and to examine the way in which services are currently responding to the issue.
