Graham Trotman Ltd, Stelling consumer market of over 320 million people. Over one House, 66 Wilton Road, London SW1V 1DE. Contesting the Foreshore Jeremy Boissevain, Tom Selwyn, 2025-10-01. This collection of essays is about tourism and social, political and economic relations in coastal locations in various parts of the world. The starting point of each chapter is the ethnographic study of one particular place. However, the authors are also concerned with wider regional, national and global forces which shape and influence the local economies and societies under review. Although most of the essays focus on the European coastline, the book is intended to have implications for other geographical areas. In most parts of the world, coastal settlements and contexts are changing rapidly and markedly. These contexts are routinely characterised by conflict between different interest groups contesting the ownership and control of the foreshore and its resources. One of the threads running through the volume is that coastal regions are often sites of fishing and related traditional activities. The chapters discuss the relationships between traditional stakeholders such as fishermen and local residents and new stakeholders including new residents, second home owners, tourists and tourism, property developers and fish farm managers as they vie for status, influence and ultimately for space on the foreshore. The underlying preoccupation of the volume as a whole is the extent of penetration and transformation resulting from the onward march of capitalism and the market system in the coastal locations studied. This is the second publication in the MARE Publication Series. A collection of essays studying the rapid changes in coastal settlements due to the conflicting interests of traditional and new stakeholders. Contesting the Foreshore Jeremy Boissevain, Tom Selwyn, 2004. This collection of essays examines social, political and economic relations in primarily European coastal locations through the lens of tourism. The contributors explore the intersecting interests of fishing, tourism and development and the conflict among local communities and market forces, all of which are infused with the symbolism of the sea as a place.

of mystery and danger From the tensions between Cornish villagers and city visitors to the explosion of resort development in Gran Canaria the authors consider the relationship between local residents businesses and tourist newcomers as they vie for status influence and ultimately for space Planning the Impossible Eirini Kasioumi,2021-07-05 International airports have become an inherent part of many urban regions and key transport infrastructures for metropolitan economies Yet they are also a source of tensions often associated with the contrasting impacts of their operation Taking the example of Charles de Gaulle airport CDG in Paris the author analyzes the factors influencing urban development and the related spatial strategies Step by step she traces the history of the airport examines prominent conflicts and their management by planners and derives broader lessons Intended for town planners policy makers and urban designers the book makes an important contribution to understanding the challenges and assessing the effectiveness of planning approaches for airport regions
