

Aspects of Nursing and Euthanasia

✓ Exclusively available on IvyPanda

Introduction

Nursing is inevitably related to ethical dilemmas, and thus the behavior and decision-making of medical personnel vary drastically in each patient's case. Euthanasia as a phenomenon of a democratic society, being an aspect of nursing, has been under discussion for decades. However, people still have not concluded whether it is ethically appropriate or not and if the legalization of euthanasia should spread wider. Most people whose profession is related to nursing believe that euthanasia should not be supported by the government and be stated legal because its purpose is to ensure a person's right to get the proper care.

Legalization of Euthanasia and its Consequences

Research on the topic of euthanasia and people's attitude to it has been conducted for many years. Recent studies prove the point of view on medical assistance in dying (MAiD) that was mentioned above. The subject of the research by Monteverde (2017) was to ask people who work in the medical sphere and face the necessity for euthanasia, whether they are for or against it, and why. These people's opinions were gathered to reflect the situation in the world – in other words, to reveal what is the global attitude towards MAiD. The result has shown that countries where euthanasia remains illegal, such as Australia, New Zealand, Ireland, and the United Kingdom, attempt to legalize it (Monteverde, 2017). At the same time, the representatives of countries where MAiD is legal, such as the United States, Canada, and Switzerland, claimed that it requires a thorough law inspection aimed at legislation concerning euthanasia improvement (Monteverde, 2017). Thus, legalizing this type of helping people with serious diseases does not guarantee its proper functioning and may affect the medical personnel negatively if the law system has imperfections leading to nurses' prosecution.
