

Chapter 23: The Cold War (1945–1991)

Section 1: The Cold War Unfolds

Even though America began to demobilize (to decrease the size of your nation's military) after World War II as it had after World War I, the United States and the Soviet Union (name of Russia when it was communist from 1917–1991) emerged as the world's only superpowers (the most powerful countries on Earth). Both nations created military alliances made up of nations they protected or occupied, which pledged to help each other in peace and war. The United States helped form the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), made up of America and its Western European allies.

Under Joseph Stalin (1924–1953), the Soviet Union created the Warsaw Pact with the eastern European countries that she controlled. The differences between U.S. democracy (a system of government led by and for the whole population of a country, usually through representation) and capitalism (an economic system in a country where production and prices are controlled by buyers and sellers and ownership of businesses by citizens is possible) and Soviet communism (a country where the government owns everything for the good of its people and where classes of society do not exist) in addition to deep distrust between the two countries was the basis for the Cold War from 1945–1991. The Cold War was called that because the two countries never went to war directly with each other, but they were continually unfriendly to each other, like giving someone the "cold shoulder."

The line between the democratic West and communist East in Europe was called the Iron Curtain. An iron curtain is like a curtain on your window that cannot be opened. Many revolts challenging Soviet domination in Europe were extinguished using military force.

The Soviets wanted to spread communist beliefs around the globe. When Nikita Khrushchev came to power after the brutal Joseph Stalin died, he eased censorship and increased tolerance. However, repression returned under the next Soviet leader, Leonid Brezhnev, when he came to power in 1964. U.S. President Harry Truman (1945–1953) presented what was referred to as the Truman Doctrine (America's foreign policy to stop the spread of communism anywhere in the world). American leaders followed a policy of containment. This was a strategy of keeping communism from spreading to other nations.

The superpowers also engaged in an arms race (a weapons race) to develop the strongest and most nuclear weapons, especially after the Soviet Union detonated their first atomic bomb in 1949. To reduce the threat of war, the two sides held several disarmament talks. In addition, the "red scare" (scare of communism spreading to America) in the United States resulted in Senator Joseph McCarthy leading a hunt in America for communists in the government and military. The House Un-American Activities Committee (HUAC) also sought out communist sympathizers. Eventually, McCarthy and his witch-hunt were stopped.

Then, in 1959, Fidel Castro led a communist revolution in Cuba (island nation 90 miles from the U.S.) and became its leader. To bring down Castro's communist regime, U.S. President John F. Kennedy (1961–1963) supported an invasion of Cuba in 1961, but the attempt failed. One year later, in October of 1962, the Soviets sent nuclear missiles to Cuba. Many feared a nuclear war. This was called the Cuban Missile Crisis. After the United States blockaded Cuba with its navy, Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev agreed to remove the missiles.

The late 1960s to late 1970s was called the era of détente (a relaxing of tension, especially between nations, by using negotiations or agreements). Richard Nixon, U.S. President from 1969–1974, used détente very successfully when he began to decrease the tension with China (largest country in Asia then became communists in 1949) by going to that country, the first U.S. President to do so. Détente ended, however, when the Soviet Union invaded Afghanistan (country bordering the Soviet Union to its south) in 1979, when Jimmy Carter (1977–1981) was the U.S. President.

One issue that began to be discussed during the era of détente was intended to limit the use of anti-ballistic missiles (ABMs). These weapons were designed to shoot down missiles launched by hostile nations. The ABMs were considered a threat because they could give one side more protection, which might encourage it to attack another country since it could defend itself better if attacked. Then, during the 1980s, U.S. President Ronald Reagan (1981–1989) proposed a missile defense program called "Star Wars." Other agreements limited the number of nuclear weapons that nations could maintain, which eased Cold War tensions.

Strategy? Hal Brands,2014-01-21 Grand strategy is one of the most widely used and abused concepts in the foreign policy lexicon In this important book Hal Brands explains why grand strategy is a concept that is so alluring and so elusive to those who make American statecraft He explores what grand strategy is why it is so essential and why it is so hard to get right amid the turbulence of global affairs and the chaos of domestic politics At a time when grand strategy is very much in vogue

Brands critically appraises just how feasible that endeavor really is Brands takes a historical approach to this subject examining how four presidential administrations from that of Harry S Truman to that of George W Bush sought to do grand strategy at key inflection points in the history of modern U S foreign policy As examples ranging from the early Cold War to the Reagan years to the War on Terror demonstrate grand strategy can be an immensely rewarding undertaking but also one that is full of potential pitfalls on the long road between conception and implementation Brands concludes by offering valuable suggestions for how American leaders might approach the challenges of grand strategy in the years to come
