Monitoring and Evaluation in Health and Social Development Stephen Bell, Peter Aggleton, 2016-02-01 New approaches are needed to monitor and evaluate health and social development Existing strategies tend to require expensive time consuming analytical procedures The growing emphasis on results based programming has resulted in evaluation being conducted in order to demonstrate accountability and success rather than how change takes place what works and why The tendency to monitor and evaluate using log frames and their variants closes policy makers and practitioners eyes to the sometimes unanticipated means by which change takes place Two recent developments hold the potential to transcend these difficulties and to lead to important changes in the way in which the effects of health and social development programming are understood First there is growing interest in ways of monitoring programmes and assessing impact that are more grounded in the realities of practice than many of the results based methods currently utilised Second there are calls for the greater use of interpretive and ethnographic methods in programme design monitoring and evaluation Responding to these concerns this book illustrates the potential of interpretative methods to aid understanding and make a difference in real people s lives Through a focus on individual and community perspectives and locally grounded explanations the methods explored in this book offer a potentially richer way of assessing the relationships between intent action and change in health and social development in Africa Asia Europe and the Americas

Kwasi Adu Adu Obirikorang, Mathis Von Ahnen, Kwamena Quagrainie, Jemimah Etorname Kassah, 2024-11-22 Food security has been persistently recognized in global discourse as one of the world's main challenges While some progress has been made towards ensuring access to safe nutritious and sufficient food for all people all year round SDG Target 2.1 or eradicating all forms of malnutrition SDG Target 2.2 over 800 million people are estimated to suffer from chronic hunger With outputs from capture fisheries stagnating over the past few decades aquaculture holds the potential to play crucial roles in achieving food security but its importance for food security and nutrition has often been undervalued and concerns exist regarding its environmental footprint The rapid expansion of aquaculture has consequences relating to environmental sustainability but aquaculture nonetheless holds the potential to significantly contribute to human food security The goal of this collection is to highlight the contribution of aquaculture to food security through the development of sound and sustainable production practices The focus will include all three pillars of sustainability environmental sustainability production technologies that optimize fish production and or minimize significant environmental disruptions or impacts economic sustainability value chain analyses market access for fish products policy analysis and social and community sustainability socially responsible aquaculture practices contributing to food security and well being Sustaining the Momentum , 2015 Insights on Population and Health Issues Affecting Women and Girls in Kenya National Council for Population and Development (Kenya : 2012), 2016 Lessons for Effective Fiscal Decentralization in Sub-Saharan Africa Mr. Niko A Hobdari, Vina Nguyen, Mr. Salvatore Dell'Erba, Mr. Edgardo Ruggiero, 2018-07-06 Fiscal decentralization is becoming a pressing issue in a number of countries in sub Saharan Africa reflecting demands for a greater local voice in spending decisions and efforts to strengthen social cohesion Against this backdrop this paper seeks to distill the lessons for an effective fiscal decentralization reform focusing on the macroeconomic aspects The main findings for sub Saharan African countries that have decentralized based on an empirical analysis and four case studies Kenya Nigeria South Africa Uganda are as follows Determinants and effectiveness Empirical results suggest that 1 the major driving forces behind fiscal decentralization in sub Saharan Africa include efforts to defuse ethnic conflicts the initial level of income and the urbanization rate whereas strength of democracy is not an important determinant for decentralization and 2 decentralization in sub Saharan Africa is associated with higher growth in the presence of stronger institutions Spending assignments The allocation of spending across levels of government in the four case studies is broadly consistent with best practice However in Uganda unlike in the other three case studies subnational governments have little flexibility to make spending decisions as a result of a deconcentrated rather than a devolved system of government Own revenue The assignment of taxing powers is broadly in line with best practice in the four case studies with the bulk of subnational revenue coming from property taxes and from fees for local services However own revenues are a very small fraction of subnational spending reflecting weak cadaster systems and a high level of informality in the economy The Weekly Review ,1982 Criteria for Identifying Marginalised Areas for Purposes of the Equalisation Fund ,2013
