Module-1

|----------|---|------------|
| 1 | a. Illustrate with suitable examples the different levels on NLP. | (08 Marks) |
| | b. List and explain the challenges of Natural Language Processing. | (06 Marks) |
| | c. Explain the role of transformational rules in transformational grammar with the help of an example. | (06 Marks) |

1.a. There are four types of process analysis:

1.Lexical Analysis

Lexical Analysis is analysis of words which is the fundamental for natural language. It includes word level processing i.e., morphological knowledge about the structure and formation of words.

2.Syntactic Analysis

Syntactic Analysis considers sequence of words that forms a unit or sentence. Decomposition of sentence into words and identify their relationship.

3.Semantic Analysis

Semantic Analysis is associated with the meaning of language and meaningful representation of linguistic input.

4.Discourse Level

Discourse Level interprets the structure and meaning of language units referred as Discourse Knowledge. Discourse Knowledge deals with how the meaning of a sentence is determined by preceding sentence.

Eg: how pronoun refers to the preceding noun.

It determines the function of sentence in the text. Pragmatic(Sensible) knowledge is needed for resolving anaphoric(ideas other than text) references.

Eg: I went with Joy____

1b. Challenges of NLP:

There are number of factors that make NLP difficult. It relates to the problems of representation and interpretation. The language computing requires precise representation of context. It is highly ambiguous and vague(i.e., achieving such representation can be difficult).

- Inability to capture all the required knowledge : It is impossible to embody all sources of knowledge that humans use and not possible by humans to write procedures that initiate language processing.
- Greater difficulty: Identifying its semantics is a difficult task. The principle of compositional semantics considers the meaning of a sentence to be a composition of the meaning of words.

Also words alone donot make a sentence.

Example1: I do not like icecream

Do not I ice cream like → is wrong

Example2: Kabir and Ayan are married.

Kabir and Suha are married.
