I. Introduction

- A. Commencing vocational rehabilitation for an injured worker requires that two documents be prepared, the vocational assessment report and the individual written rehabilitation plan (IWRP). The two are sometimes confused, since the vocational assessment is used together with other information to prepare the IWRP. The two are, however, distinctly different in form and function.
- B. The vocational assessment is an overview of the worker's present status.
- C. The IWRP is a roadmap for vocational rehabilitation efforts, which are to begin as soon as the plan is agreed upon.
- D. Unfortunately, many plans are so vague that they do not provide any meaningful guidance to the injured worker or to the other parties involved in the case. The purpose of this paper is to stimulate dialogue about ways the rehabilitation plan can be improved, thus improving services to the injured worker.

II. The Vocational Assessment

- A. Initial interview
 - 1. Critical for the counselor to listen to the injured worker, and to understand his/her fears regarding the rehabilitation process.
 - 2. The counselor must provide the injured worker with a copy of the Rehabilitation Rules, and be prepared to address the fears and concerns.
- B. Rule requirements [taken directly from NCIC RURPWCC III.E.(2)]:
 - 1. The vocational assessment involves a face-to-face interview between the injured worker and the counselor, and includes the counselor's evaluation of the worker's:
 - a. Social issues
 - b. Medical issues
 - c. Vocational standing
 - d. Other information significant to employment potential
 - 2. The purpose of the evaluation is:
 - a. To determine whether the worker can benefit from vocational rehabilitation services, and, if so,
 - b. To identify the specific type and sequence of appropriate services.
 - 3. The evaluation should include
 - a. An evaluation of the worker's expectations in the rehabilitation process.
 - b. An evaluation of any specific requests by the worker for medical treatment or vocational training
 - c. A statement of the counselor's conclusion regarding the worker's need for rehabilitation services, benefits expected from services
 - d. A description of the proposed rehabilitation plan.
- C. During the vocational assessment phase, the counselor may refer the injured worker for academic testing to assess current skills or may conduct vocational testing him/herself.
