

- The disk-processor enclosure (DPE) is 3U in size and houses each storage processor and the first tray of disks. This form factor is used in the lower-end VNX models (VNX5100™, VNX5300™, and VNX5500™) and supports a maximum of 75, 125, and 250 drives, respectively.
- Blade (or Data Mover) access data from the back end and provide host access using the same UltraFlex I/O technology that supports the NFS, CIFS, and pNFS protocols. The Blades in each array are scalable and provide redundancy.
- The Data Mover enclosure (DME) is 2U in size and houses the Data Movers (Blades). The DME is similar in form to the SPE and is used on all VNX models that support file.
- Standby power supplies (SPSs) are 1U in size and provide enough power to each storage processor to ensure that any data in flight is de-staged to the vault area in the event of a power failure. This ensures that no writes are lost. When the array is restarted, the pending writes are reconciled and persisted.
- Control Stations are 1U in size and provide management functions to the file-side components referred to as Blades. The Control Station is responsible for Blade failover. The Control Station may optionally be configured with a matching secondary Control Station to ensure redundancy on the VNX array.
- Disk-array enclosures (DAE) house the drives used in the array. They enable the expansion of each array's drive count to provide the storage needed for the expanding needs over time of each implementation. The 15-drive DAE is 3U in size, the 25-drive is 2U in size, and the 60-drive DAE is 4U in size.
- The SPE/DPE and DME use dual power supplies that are integrated into the chassis, and provide back-up electricity if a single power supply fails.
- For NAS services (i.e., Data Mover Blade I/O options):
