Citizen airmen : a history of the Air Force Reserve 1946-1994 ,1997 For nearly fifty years citizen airmen have served in the nation's defense as members of the Air Force Reserve Citizen Airmen A History of the Air Force Reserve 1946-1994 begins with the fledgling air reserve program initiated in 1916 traces its progress through World War II and then concentrates on the period 1946 through 1994 The study skillfully describes the process by which a loosely organized program evolved into today's impressive force The Air Force Reserve story is told within the context of national political and military policy and stresses that over the decades as national needs have increased reservists have met the challenges Initially the Air Force treated its reserve units as supplemental forces and equipped them with surplus equipment Shortly after the Air Force Reserve was established in 1948 its members mobilized for Korean War duty and they served throughout the conflict The Reserve program subsequently fell into disarray and required patient rebuilding The passage of a series of key federal laws related to personnel issues and the introduction of the air reserve technician program greatly assisted in this rejuvenation process In the 1960s the Air Force Reserve demonstrated its mettle as it participated in numerous mobilizations reflecting the Cold War tensions of the era Reservists were involved in operations ranging from the Berlin Crisis of 1961-1962 to the Southeast Asia mobilizations in 1968 In the 1970s the Air Force Reserve program assumed heightened importance when the Department of Defense adopted the Total Force Policy This concept treated the active forces the National Guard and all reserve forces as an integrated force Reservists were now expected to meet the same readiness standards as their active duty counterparts Since then the Air Force Reserve has demonstrated its ability to perform a wide variety of missions Air Reservists participated in American military operations in Grenada and Panama

Files 1989 Kathleen Thacker,1989 Youth Vs. Experience in the Enlisted Air Force Mary Anne Doyle,1998 Evaluates the effect of experience mix on unit size and considers how the Air Force can adapt to the demands imposed on individual work units as the mix changes Using empirical evidence from one large Air Force occupation the study develops an estimation technique that expands on available productivity data to infer learning curves for all tasks Concludes that 1 experienced units can be staffed with fewer people if the work mix in an occupation is reallocated to match the experience mix manpower requirements thus should vary with experience mix 2 current guidelines already allow unit managers sufficient flexibility to adjust to changes in staffing levels so no changes to work allocation guidelines are necessary in the occupation studied 3 enforcement of training and supervision guidelines diminish flexibility only for work units with extreme experience configurations To accommodate the increased supervisory workload generated by a less experienced unit work unit managers should allocate a larger proportion of supervisory work to personnel serving in jobs other than Senior Supervisor and 4 relative productivities can be inferred from a limited data collection effort and occupational survey data The method described in this study should be used to evaluate tradeoffs between experience mix and unit size for other Air Force occupations
