Sustainability Science and Engineering Martin A. Abraham,2005-12-16 Sustainable development is commonly defined as development that meets the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs Sustainability in engineering incorporates ethical and social issues into the design of products and processes that will be used to benefit society as a whole Sustainability Science and Engineering Volume 1 Defining Principles sets out a series of Sustainable Engineering Principles that will help engineers design products and services to meet societal needs with minimal impact on the global ecosystem Using specific examples and illustrations the authors cleverly demonstrate opportunities for sustainable engineering providing readers with valuable insight to applying these principles This book is ideal for technical and non technical readers looking to enhance their understanding of the impact of sustainability in a technical society Defines the principles of sustainable engineering Provides specific examples of the application of sustainable engineering in industry Represents the viewpoints of current leaders in the field and describes future needs in new technologies

Management ,1982 NASA SP-7500 United States. National Aeronautics and Space Administration,1982 Achieving System Reliability Growth Through Robust Design and Test David Nicholls,Paul Lein,2011-06 Historically the reliability growth process has been thought of and treated as a reactive approach to growing reliability based on failures discovered during testing or most unfortunately once a system product has been delivered to a customer As a result many reliability growth models are predicated on starting the reliability growth process at test time zero with some initial level of reliability usually in the context of a time based measure such as Mean Time Between Failure MTBF Time zero represents the start of testing and the initial reliability of the test item is based on its inherent design The problem with this approach still predominant today is that it ignores opportunities to grow reliability during the design of a system or product i e opportunities to go into reliability growth testing with a higher initial inherent reliability at time zero In addition to the traditional approaches to reliability growth during test this book explores the activities and opportunities that can be leveraged to promote and achieve reliability growth during the design phase of the overall system life cycle The ability to do so as part of an integrated proactive design environment has significant implications for developing and delivering reliable items quickly on time and within budget This book offers new definitions of how failures can be characterized and how those new definitions can be used to develop metrics that will quantify how effective a Design for Reliability DFR process is in 1 identifying failure modes and 2 mitigating their root failure causes Reliability growth can only occur in the presence of both elements
