Abstract The purpose of this study was to examine the effects of a 12-week, 100% body weight (BW) resistance training program on the strength and muscle mass of older women. The subjects were 12 women (mean age = 68.5 years) who participated in a 12-week, 100% BW resistance training program. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The subjects performed a series of exercises targeting the major muscle groups. The results showed that the subjects experienced significant increases in strength and muscle mass over the 12-week period. The findings suggest that a 12-week, 100% BW resistance training program is effective for improving strength and muscle mass in older women.
