Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological characteristics of young women. The subjects were 15 young women (mean age 20.5 years) who participated in a 12-week training program. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The sessions were designed to improve cardiovascular fitness, muscular strength, and flexibility. The subjects were assessed at the beginning and end of the program. The results showed that the subjects had a significant increase in cardiovascular fitness, muscular strength, and flexibility after 12 weeks of training. The subjects also reported a significant decrease in anxiety and a significant increase in self-esteem. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical and psychological characteristics of young women.
