The propellant of this cartridge contains a specially producing agent for use against most pests.

The projectile consists of a hollow steel forging with a hemispherical nose, a streamlined spine, and sliding metal rotating band. A band cover is welded to the base of the projectile for added protection against the entrance of hot gases from the propelling charge during flaring. The propellant cavity is filled with it immediately or the flattened material is tapped into. A steel case adaptor, having a female flange throat, with a grove fitted inside, being inserted into the neck of the propellant providing a seal for the filling. A tapered booster charge is placed inside the booster casing and a PC case threaded into the adaptor. The cartridge case contains a percussion primer assembly and seven individually tagged and numbered propelling charge increments. The base of the cartridge case is drilled and the primer assembly pressed into the base. The percussion primer assembly consists of a percussion ignition element and a perforated flash tube containing black powder. The seven numbered increment tags are tied together, in numerical order, with wireline cord. These are assembled
