Is Technology Good for Education? Neil Selwyn, 2016-06-07 Digital technologies are a key feature of contemporary education Schools colleges and universities operate along high tech lines while alternate forms of online education have emerged to challenge the dominance of traditional institutions According to many experts the rapid digitization of education over the past ten years has undoubtedly been a good thing Is Technology Good For Education offers a critical counterpoint to this received wisdom challenging some of the central ways in which digital technology is presumed to be positively affecting education Instead Neil Selwyn considers what is being lost as digital technologies become ever more integral to education provision and engagement Crucially he questions the values agendas and interests that stand to gain most from the rise of digital education This concise up to the minute analysis concludes by considering alternate approaches that might be capable of rescuing and perhaps revitalizing the ideals of public education while not denying the possibilities of digital technology altogether

Social Character, Tribalism and Society Chris Shilling, Philip A. Mellor, 2025-10-30 Chris Shilling and Philip A Mellor argue that recent developments in social character are key to explaining the sectarian tribalism that has afflicted American and European societies in recent decades Building upon one of the most influential books of the twentieth century David Riesman's The Lonely Crowd the authors explore the social and economic conditions that have resulted in a thinning of empathy and mutual identification the significance of inequalities and social movements in stimulating the emergence of identity directedness and the opportunity directed exploitation of dynamic social change risk and uncertainty Reflecting on an era marked by intensifying conflict Social Character Tribalism and Society asks whether it is possible that a saving remnant could emerge from the characterological struggle that is fraying the social fabric and threatening to destabilise social order
