Teff Production Manual For Ethiopia:

The economics of teff: Exploring Ethiopia's biggest cash crop Minten, Bart, Taffesse, Alemayehu Seyoum, Brown, Petra, 2018-07-19 Considerable poverty and food insecurity in Ethiopia combined with the overwhelming majority of Ethiopians who depend on agriculture for their livelihoods make agricultural transformation a crucial development goal for the country One promising improvement is to increase production of teff the calorie and nutrient rich but low yielding staple The Economics of Teff Exploring Ethiopia's Biggest Cash Crop examines key aspects of teff production marketing and consumption with a focus on opportunities for and challenges to further growth The authors identify ways to realize teff's potential including improving productivity and resilience selecting and scaling up new technologies establishing distribution systems adapted to different areas needs managing labor demand and postharvest operations and increasing access to larger and more diverse markets The book's analysis and policy conclusions should be useful to policy makers researchers and others concerned with Ethiopia's economic development

Cities and agricultural transformation in Africa

Vandecasteele, Joachim, Tamru, Seneshaw, Minten, Bart, Swinnen, Johan, 2016-07-01 Due to the rapid growth of cities in Africa many more farmers are now living in rural hinterlands in relatively close proximity to cities where many provide food to urban residents However empirical evidence on how urbanization affects these farmers is scarce To fill this gap this paper explores the relationship between proximity to a city and the production behavior of rural staple crop producers In particular we analyze data from teff producing farmers in major producing areas around Addis Ababa the Ethiopian capital We find that farmers located closer to Addis Ababa face higher wages and land rental prices and because they receive higher teff prices they have better incentives to intensify production Moreover we observe that modern input use land and labor productivity and profitability in teff production improve with urban proximity This urban proximity has a strong and significant effect on these aspects of teff production possibly related to the use of more formal factor markets lower transaction costs in crop production and marketing and better access to information In contrast we do not find a strong and positive relationship between rural population density increases and agricultural transformation increased population density seems to lead to immiserizing effects in these settings Our results show that urban proximity should be considered as an important determinant of the process of agricultural intensification and transformation in developing countries

Patterns of agricultural production among male and female holders Kasa, Leulseged, Warner, James, Kieran, Caitlin, 2015-12-08 Gender inequities present a major barrier to increased agricultural production and food security in Ethiopia However a lack of nationally representative sex disaggregated data and analysis hinder the development and implementation of evidence based policies This report aims to contribute to filling this gap by presenting a gender analysis of the Ethiopian Central Statistics Agency's Agricultural Sample Survey AgSS data collected between 2010 and 2013 The analysis reveals clear gender gaps between male and female holders in terms of human capital natural capital financial capital agricultural input use and participation in crop production and livestock husbandry Specifically female holders are less educated have less family labor own and manage less land and are less likely to cultivate rented land compared to male holders Concurrently female holders have limited access to extension and advisory services and therefore to knowledge and information concerning best agronomic practices Compared to male holders female holders are less likely to cultivate commercial and economically valuable crops This difference substantially contributes to the gender resource gap since these crops generate a higher market value than traditional staple crops Moreover a significantly lower proportion of female holders reported ownership of livestock especially oxen and equines which are the primary sources of draught power for plowing and transportation in rural Ethiopia Overall this report identifies significant differences in the patterns of agricultural production of male and female holders in Ethiopia and calls for closing these gender gaps because it would yield enormous benefits at the individual household and national levels The report also puts forward policy priorities for prospective interventions
