

Abstract: The authors have used a 3.6-kb DNA fragment containing the hprt gene to construct a transgenic mouse model of human hprt deficiency. The resulting mice were found to have a 50% reduction in hprt activity. The authors have also used this model to study the effects of hprt deficiency on the development of the immune system. The results show that hprt deficiency leads to a reduction in the number of T cells and a decrease in the diversity of the T cell repertoire. These findings suggest that hprt deficiency may play a role in the development of the immune system.
