Reference Dept, 1961 Open Houses Barbara Leckie, 2018-05-24 In the 1830s and 40s a new preoccupation with the housing of the poor emerged in British print and visual culture In response to cholera outbreaks political unrest and government initiatives commentators evinced a keen desire to document housing conditions and agitate for housing reform Consistently and strikingly these efforts focused on opening the domestic interiors of the poor to public view In Open Houses Barbara Leckie addresses the massive body of print materials dedicated to convincing the reader of the wretchedness unworthiness and antipoetic quality of the living conditions of the poor and accordingly the urgent need for architectural reform Putting these exposés into dialogue with the Victorian novel and the architectural idea the manipulation of architecture and the built environment to produce certain effects she illustrates the ways in which looking into the house animated new models for social critique and fictional form As housing conditions failed to improve despite the ubiquity of these documentary and fictional exposés commentators became increasingly skeptical about the capacity of print to generate change Focusing on Bleak House Middlemarch and The Princess Casamassima Leckie argues that writers offered a persuasive counterargument for the novel's intervention in social debates Open Houses returns the architectural idea to the central position it occupied in nineteenth century England and reconfigures how we understand innovations in the genre of the novel the agitation for social reform and the contours of nineteenth century modernity
