Abstract

Student housing is an entity in housing studies which researchers relegated to the background, this may not be unconnected to the fact that it has relative less problems in terms of financing, substandard quality and provision of infrastructure facilities and services since institutions' has taken complete responsibility of everything. However, in the last few decades, enrolment in higher education institutions has been precipitously exceeding the limited institutions student housing which generates striking demand in the private housing rental market which stunned scholars in student housing studies. Students living in the private sector properties were said to have faced more challenges than those living in hall of resident therefore, advantages and the nature of these challenges were discuss in this paper.

1. Introduction

Housing is a multi-faceted field of study with diverse areas of interests. Some scholars dwell on housing finance, some on demand and supply, housing delivery, quality, formation, market, satisfaction and so on. Generally many researchers have been focusing on either urban or rural housing shortage, substandard quality, low level facilities and services, financing and of recent some are studying institutional housing, students housing inclusive. This may not be unconnected with the less problems faced by the institutional housing more especially in terms of provision, financing and management, because institutions' take full charge of everything.

Housing in it multi-faceted dimensions, is one of the important basic need of an individual, family and any given society. Being students are special group of people with a common interest; they are also special consumers of housing like any other special areas or institutions. Such speciality or institutions include school dormitories, military and police barracks, care homes, hospitals, prison and camps. Their housing environment is unique that shows the type of activity performs in such areas and their specific requirements also are unique that differentiate them with other housing environment.

2. A Review of Housing Concept

Indeed many scholars converged on the idea that housing is a basic necessity to mankind in life and is second to none but food, health and clothing. In other words, man seeks protection from the environmental elements only after being satisfied the need for food and clothing. Therefore, it can be regarded as one of the basic needs of man as many scholars are of the opinion that housing is one of the most important necessities of life. 'Fundamental right', it is a priority for the attainment of living standard and it is the core to the man-environmental interaction, an agent of security that lead to happy, productive and fulfilling lives' be it rural or urban (Ademiluyi & Raji, 2008; Jiboye, 2010; Yuseff, 2011 & Cagamas Holdings, 2013). In all these, one will understand the importance of house to man and without it man cannot feel secured against physical elements and will be unable to lead happy, productive, fulfilling lives and attaining high living standards. Therefore, students like any other human being, housing is their fundamental need and securing good, safe and affordable housing will lead to run happy life, attaining high living standards, intellectually creative and have rewarding better life.

Housing in the modern time should be more than a mere structure, permanent or make shift, designed basically for shelter to protect the occupant against the unwanted external elements and intruders. Housing should take up all the social services and utilities that make individual, neighbourhood or community a habitable environment. Further to this perspective Sekar, (1991) opined, in the contemporary time, housing should have some basic infrastructure facilities like clean water supply, sanitary facilities, kitchen, drainage, electricity, access road and basic services to be consider a house. In like manner, many scholars agreed housing in the contemporary period should be seen beyond shelter and should consist of other essential facilities like water supply, electricity,

Photojournalism and Citizen Journalism Stuart Allan, 2017-06-26 If everyone with a smartphone can be a citizen photojournalist who needs professional photojournalism This rather flippant question cuts to the heart of a set of pressing issues where an array of impassioned voices may be heard in vigorous debate While some of these voices are confidently predicting photojournalism s impending demise as the latest casualty of internet driven convergence others are heralding its dramatic rebirth pointing to the democratisation of what was once the exclusive domain of the professional. Regardless of where one is situated in relation to these stark polarities, however, it is readily apparent that photojournalism is being decisively transformed across shifting uneven conditions for civic participation in ways that raise important questions for journalism's forms and practices in a digital era. This book's contributors identify and critique a range of factors currently recasting photojournalism's professional ethos, devoting particular attention to the challenges posed by the rise of citizen journalism. This book was originally published as two special issues in Digital Journalism and Journalism Practice. Photography Theory James Elkins, 2013-10-18. Photography Theory presents forty of the world's most active art historians and theorists, including Victor Burgin, Joel Snyder, Rosalind Krauss, Alan Trachtenberg, Geoffrey Batchen, Carol Squiers, Margaret Iversen, and Abigail Solomon Godeau, in animated debate on the nature of photography. Photography has been around for nearly two centuries, but we are no closer to understanding what it is. For some people, a photograph is an optically accurate impression of the world; for others, it is mainly a way of remembering people and places. Some view it as a sign of bourgeois life, a kind of addiction of the middle class, whilst others see it as a troublesome interloper that has confused people's ideas of reality and fine art to the point that they have difficulty even defining what a photograph is. For some, the whole question of finding photography's nature is itself misguided from the beginning. This provocative second volume in the Routledge The Art Seminar series presents not one but many answers to the question: what makes a photograph a photograph? The International Photojournalism Industry Jonathan Ilan, 2018-07-17. How are events turned into news pictures that define them for the audience? How do events become commodified into pictures that both capture them and reiterate the values of the agencies that sell them? This book looks at every stage of the production of news photographs as they move to and from the ground and are sold around the world. Based on extensive fieldwork at a leading international news agency that includes participant observation with photographers in the field at the agency's local and global picture desks in Israel, Singapore, and the UK, in-depth interviews with pictures professionals and observations and in-depth interviews at The Guardian's picture desk in London, the findings in this book point to a wide cultural production infrastructure hidden from and yet also nurtured and thus very much determined by the consumer's eye.
