During the past decade consumer demand for convenient fresh like safe high quality food products has grown The food industry has responded by applying a number of new technologies including high hydrostatic pressure for food processing and preservation In addition food scientists have demonstrated the feasibility of industrial scale high pressure processing This technology is of specific interest to the food industry because it provides an attractive alternative to conventional methods of thermal processing which often produce undesirable changes in foods and hamper the balance between high quality color flavor and functionality and safety In addition it offers opportunities for creating new ingredients and products

because of the specific actions of high pressure on biological materials and food constituents It allows food scientists to redesign existing processes and to create entirely new ones using high pressure technology alone or in combination with conventional processes e.g pressure temperature combinations Researchers have investigated high pressure processing for the past century Scientists such as Hite and Bridgman did pioneering work at the turn of the 20th century Then during the 1980s and 1990s there was a large effort to investigate the effects of high pressure on biological materials particularly foods The initial research activities in the late 1980s and early 1990s focused on exploratory activities in the food area
