

The Importance of Having a College Degree - Essay Example Essay

High record of college seniors do not comprehend the meaning of acquiring a college degree. They tend to pursue higher levels of education for ambiguous reasons. Joining college decisions are made by either parents or through wrong advice from friends and relatives. Parents sometimes want their children to pursue courses that they were not able to pursue during their time in college without taking considerations of their kids preference in college course. Some students pursue individual courses to gain prestigious power. They believe that prestigious courses earn them more respect in the society. Some students pursue higher level degrees because the government, society and their family believe that it's a basic requirement for every person. Most of these reasons do not revolve around the importance of pursuing a college degree.

Various debates have been carried out regarding the importance of having a college degree. Alex Kern argue that mentors tend to advise students that in acquiring college education enables one acquire a profession of choice. Some even relate college education with prominent people in the society who possess the same. There are those who believe that credentials give people security of assurance in working places. According to Beckstead, these reasons do not give a strong argument on why one needs a university degree. This is because having a college degree is not a guarantee of having a job. Some people with more than one degree still tarmac seeking for a vacancy in firms. Thus, it is the work of the mentor to pass correct information on the importance of college education. First, they should convince learners that every field of study is indispensable. This is achievable through the increase of human understanding on various subjects that are looked down upon. They should make learners understand that each course has its own advantages and skills that are sufficient in tackling day to day decisions. It is from here that they will be able to know that the analytical skills they had gained in the process are greater than any degree being awarded (Kern, Alex).

Secondly, learners should be aware that university education helps them view the world differently by coming out of their comfort zone. College education offers courses that are either of their passion or not. It is only college education that will transform them to be useful in the society through their innovations gained in the course of learning. Through college, they will be offered technical skills that they did look upon. At the same time, college degree makes them be responsible. It makes them not to hate some classes or curriculum that is not well elaborated. They are offered an environment where they will engage in research and study related books to gain more insight into areas they do not understand. Thus, college degree pushes hard learners to explore a wide field of knowledge hence getting out of their comfort zone and work on their own in most circumstances (Kern, Alex).

Students should also learn that college education enables them to interact with their fellow students from different ethnical groups. Here they will be able to gain different insight from which they had no exposure. Hence, different insights gained will broaden their experience physically, grow them emotionally, and even expand their mental limits. With growth in every capacity expected, reasoning will also advance and they will be in a position to solve critical issues affecting most of them. Apart from advanced reasoning, a change of perception in a way they viewed certain societies will also change.
