The Bread-Winners

John Hay, 2015-07-11 Excerpt from The Bread Winners A Social Study In the year 1877 there occurred in several of the larger cities of the United States strikes among railway employees of a magnitude hitherto unknown in this country These led to riots and assaults on property of a serious nature Cleveland was one of the cities which felt the force of these disorders There was no army that could be called upon and the state militia was inefficient A panic prevailed in the city for days many residents sending their families out of town to places of safety My father who was living in Cleveland at that time felt that a profound misfortune and disgrace had fallen upon the country In a letter dated July 27 1877 he writes There is a mob in every city ready to join with the strikers and get their pay in robbery and there is no means of enforcing the law in case of a sudden attack on private property We are not Mexicans yet but that is about the only advantage we have over Mexico In another letter he speaks of the politician whose sympathies were all with the laboring man and none with the man whose enterprise and capital give him a living About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and
