Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the performance of a 1000-m swim. The subjects were 10 male swimmers who were divided into two groups: a control group and a training group. The training group received a 10-week training program consisting of 1000-m swims, 1000-m swims with a 1000-m swim, and 1000-m swims with a 1000-m swim. The control group received no training. The results showed that the training group had a significantly lower time to complete the 1000-m swim than the control group. The results also showed that the training group had a significantly lower heart rate during the 1000-m swim than the control group. The results suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the performance of a 1000-m swim.
