Example answers

The method for the first experiment in A was quite good, but it was only done with one group for each situation and was only done in one city, Chicago. It would be better if they did it with lots of groups and in different cities to see if the results were consistent. The result isn't surprising to me as I think all social interactions can contribute to our happiness.

The method for the experiment in text C was also quite good, but as with the experiment in A, the psychologists should have expanded the experiment. For example, they should have swapped the roles of each group because it could be that some people are naturally more collaborative than others. The results they found are quite surprising as you wouldn't think walking in step with someone would have such a big effect later on.

I think the method that Robert Provine used in text D was good as he studied people in a normal environment not a lab. He also looked at over 2,000 cases over ten years, so his research is likely to be accurate. I don't think the results are that surprising because I think I laugh a lot more with other people than when I'm on my own.

commuters = people who travel regularly to and from work

kept to themselves = stay alone and not talk to other people

- 1 past simple, past perfect continuous
- 2 past continuous
- 3 present perfect
- 4 past perfect
- 5 present perfect continuous
- 6 These forms have no name, but they are examples of future in the past: was/were about to + infinitive, was/were going to + infinitive

1b

- a past simple b past continuous
- c was/were about to + infinitive, was/were going to + infinitive
- d present perfect e past perfect
- f present perfect continuous
- g past perfect continuous
- 1 made (finished action, specified time in the past)
- 2 've (action that began in the past and has continued up to now – it's incomplete)
- 3 chatted (finished past action)
- 4 read (past action with a present result – we use the simple form because the actions are complete)
- 5 was (finished past state)
- 6 'd forgotten (happened before another time in the past – one action, not a continuous action)
- 7 had (happened for a period of time leading up to another past action – ongoing and continuous)
- 8 were leaving (action in progress at a point in time in the past); went (single past action)
- 9 have always seen (started in the past and still true now)
- 10 arrived (single past action – the continuous form would suggest that the action was repeated over and over again)

Students' own answers.

- 1 Struggling to find the right words, or emotions getting in the way.

Tip 1: Think of answers to questions and rehearse them.

Tip 2: Speak your mind without being rude.

Tip 3: Listen and ask questions.

Tip 4: Be aware of body language.

Example answers

- 1 It's a good idea to think before you speak because you might panic and say something while you're angry or upset that you don't really mean.
- 2 Pausing before giving an opinion gives you time to organise your thoughts and think of the right words.
- 3 It's good to express your opinions and be assertive and not be scared of what other people think about you.
- 4 To stop you getting angry and upset and possibly saying something that might offend other people.
- 5 Asking questions helps you understand what the other person is saying and proves that you've been listening.
- 6 You need to listen to others as you can then learn what the other people's points of view are.
- 7 More than half of communication is non-verbal, so it's important to give the right signals.
