

Vehicle emissions and efficiency

In a conventional vehicle, only about 18 to 25 % of the energy available from the fuel is used to move it on the road, depending on the driving conditions. The rest of the energy is lost to engine and drivetrain ⁽¹⁾ inefficiencies. A small proportion of the energy produced, less than 3 %, is used to power vehicle accessories (e.g. radio, air conditioning). Therefore, the potential to further improve fuel efficiency using advanced technologies remains significant. While newer diesel engines remain more fuel efficient than petrol engines, their impact on air pollution is worse because of the higher levels of NO_x and PM that they emit.

(1) The drivetrain of a motor vehicle is the group of components that deliver power to the driving wheels. This includes the transmission, the axles and the wheels.
