*Although the August 1994 Ethiopian election was a single-party election, it was the only election in the history of the country that was held in a free and fair manner. The 1994 election was a landmark event in the history of the country, as it was the first time that the people of Ethiopia had the opportunity to elect their representatives to the National Assembly. The election was held on August 6, 1994, and the EPRDF won a decisive victory, securing 55% of the vote. The election was a significant step towards the establishment of a democratic system in Ethiopia, and it was a testament to the resilience of the Ethiopian people.

Abstract: This study tests a model based on a theoretical account of the effects of social support on organizational citizenship behaviors. The model is based on the idea that social support is a key factor in the development of organizational citizenship behaviors. The model is tested using data from a sample of employees in a large organization. The results show that social support is a significant predictor of organizational citizenship behaviors. The model is supported by the data.
