The Face of Nature Garth Tissol, 2014-07-14 In these reflections on the mercurial qualities of style in Ovid s Metamorphoses Garth Tissol contends that stylistic features of the ever shifting narrative surface such as wordplay narrative disruption and the self conscious reworking of the poetic tradition are thematically significant It is the style that makes the process of reading the work a changing transformative experience as it both embodies and reflects the poem s presentation of the world as defined by instability and flux Tissol deftly illustrates that far from being merely ornamental style is as much a site for interpretation as any other element of Ovid s art In the first chapter Tissol argues that verbal wit and wordplay are closely linked to Ovidian metamorphoses Wit challenges the ordinary conceptual categories of Ovid s readers disturbing and extending the meanings and references of words Thereby it contributes on the stylistic level to the readers apprehension of flux On a larger scale parallel disturbances occur in the progress of narratives In the second and third chapters the author examines surprise and abrupt alteration of perspective as important features of narrative style We experience reading as a transformative process not only in the characteristic indirection and unpredictability of Ovid s narrative but also in the memory of his predecessors In the fourth chapter Tissol shows how Ovid subsumes Vergil s Aeneid into the Metamorphoses in an especially rich allusive exploitation one which contrasts Vergil s aetiological themes with those of his own work Originally published in 1997 The Princeton Legacy Library uses the latest print on demand technology to again make available previously out of print books from the distinguished backlist of Princeton University Press These editions preserve the original texts of these important books while presenting them in durable paperback and hardcover editions The goal of the Princeton Legacy Library is to vastly increase access to the rich scholarly heritage found in the thousands of books published by Princeton University Press since its founding in 1905

Retelling Stories, Framing Culture John

Stephens, Robyn McCallum, 2013-01-11 What happens to traditional stories when they are retold in another time and cultural context and for a different audience This first of its kind study discusses Bible stories classical myths heroic legends Arthurian romances Robin Hood lore folk tales oriental tales and other stories derived from European cultures One chapter is devoted to various retellings of classics from Shakespeare to Wind in the Willows The authors offer a general theory of what motivates the retelling of stories and how stories express the aspirations of a society An important function of stories is to introduce children to a cultural heritage and to transmit a body of shared allusions and experiences that expresses a society's central values and assumptions However the cultural heritage may be modified through a pervasive tendency of retellings to produce socially conservative outcomes because of ethnocentric androcentric and class based assumptions in the source stories that persist into retellings Therefore some stories such as classical myths are particularly resistant to feminist reinterpretations for example while other types such as folktales are more malleable In examining such possibilities the book evaluates the processes of interpretation apparent in retellings Index included Child Friendly Therapy Marcia B Stern, 2008-08-26 A treasure trove of creative tools and strategies to engage children in therapy Finding a therapy that fits kids one that cuts through their continuous state of overstimulation and aversion to traditional language based methods is not easy Now in paperback this book offers clinicians an array of inventive multifaceted therapy techniques from brain based tips to family oriented exercises 147 Traditional Stories for Primary School Children to Retell. Side-by-Side Survey Susan Alcock, John Cherry, 2016-10-02

Twenty years ago John Cherry looked forward to the day when archaeological survey projects working around the Mediterranean region the Frogs round the pond would begin to compare and synthesize the information they had collected. He anticipated researchers tackling big questions of interregional scope in new and interesting ways working at a geographical scale considerably larger than that of the individual survey. Was his optimism misplaced? Despite the extraordinary growth of interest in field survey projects and regional analysis and despite the developments in survey methodology that have been discussed and implemented in the past two decades few scholars have attempted to use survey data in a comparative mode and to answer the broad scale questions confronting social historians. In this volume which is the outcome of an advanced Workshop held at the University of Michigan in 2002 a number of prominent archaeologists return to the question of comparability. They discuss the potential benefits of working in a comparative format with evidence from many different Mediterranean survey projects and consider the practical problems that present roadblocks to achieving that objective. From mapping and manuring to human settlement and demography, environment and culture each addresses different questions often with quite different approaches together they offer a range of perspectives on how to put surveys side by side. Contributors include Susan E Alcock, John Cherry, Jack L Davis, Peter Attema, Martijn van Leusen, James C Wright, Robin Osborne, David Mattingly, T J Wilkinson and Richard E Blanton
