Information Environments: Socio-Technical Issues and Challenges Carsten Sørensen, Youngjin Yoo, Kalle

Lyytinen, Janice I. DeGross, 2006-01-17 This book records one of the continuous attempts of the IFIP Working Group 8.2 studying the interaction of information systems and the organization to explore and understand the shifting boundaries and dependencies between organizational activities and their computer support. The book marks the result of the IFIP WG 8.2 conference on Designing Ubiquitous Information Environments: Socio-Technical Issues and Challenges. Since its inception in the late 1970s, IFIP WG 8.2 has sought to understand how computer-based information systems interact and must be designed as an integrated part of the organizational design. At that time, information systems handled repetitive and remote back office functions and the main concern was work task design for repetitive input tasks and the potential impact of improved information support on organizational decision making and structure. The focus of the information system design shifted in the 1980s when computers became part of the furniture and moved into the office. Reflecting this significant change, IFIP WG 8.2 in 1989 organized a conference dedicated to the design and impact of desktop technology in order to examine how organizational processes and the locus of action changed when the computer was moved into the office. Sixteen years later, we are experiencing another significant change. Computers are now becoming part of our body and sensory system and will move out of the traditional office locations and into the wilderness. Truth and the Absence of Fact Hartry Field, 2001-03-01 Hartry Field presents a selection of thirteen essays on a set of related topics at the foundations of philosophy; one essay is previously unpublished and eight are accompanied by substantial new postscripts. Five of the essays are primarily about truth, meaning, and propositional attitudes; five are primarily about semantic indeterminacy and other kinds of factual defectiveness in our discourse; and three are primarily about issues concerning objectivity, especially in mathematics and in epistemology. The essays on truth, meaning, and the attitudes show a development from a form of correspondence theory of truth and meaning to a more deflationist perspective. The next set of papers argues that a place must be made in semantics for the idea that there are questions about which there is no fact of the matter and address the difficulties involved in making sense of this both within a correspondence theory of truth and meaning and within a deflationary theory. Two papers argue that there are questions in mathematics about which there is no fact of the matter and draw out implications of this for the nature of mathematics. And the final paper argues for a view of epistemology in which it is not a purely fact-stating enterprise. This influential work by a key figure in contemporary philosophy will reward the attention of any philosopher interested in language, epistemology, or mathematics. Uncovering Labour in Information Revolutions, 1750-2000: Volume 11 Aad Blok, Greg Downey, 2003-12-15 Discussion of the current Information Revolution tends to focus on technological developments in information and communication and overlooks both the human labour involved in the development, maintenance, and daily use of information and communication technologies.
