Geography, Culture and Education Rod Gerber, M. Williams, 2013-04-17 An important challenge for our world is to understand how cultural understanding and geographical education can be linked and used to improve the global society We readily accept that our world is constituted by numerous groups of people who are organised by committees tribes regions nations or continental entities How these groups interact show concern for each others well being and progress is still an unpredictable activity Intercultural tensions racial conflicts and religious clashes have all led to the challenges for enacting a constructive world Fundamental perspectives challenge moderate ones and the resulting tensions produce elements of fear doubt and distrust The extremist views of terrorist groups exaggerate these tensions to the extent that some different cultural groups do not prefer to live in peace with their neighbours. Deep seated intercultural tensions predominate over peaceful co existence. Such challenges may easily dominate the interaction between racial groups, tribes, indigenous peoples and colonisers. However we know that through the sound practice of intercultural understanding, cultural groups in different contexts around the world can interact and co exist successfully and productively. In fact they can work together to seek to improve their society. This does not mean that one group will dominate the other. Rather it means that both groups work together to improve their collective lives. Education has played an important role in the long term achievement of such harmony. This volume has been developed to demonstrate that geographical education can be a potent force in the development of cultural understanding in different societies.

Global Health and International Relations Colin McInnes, Kelley Lee, 2012-10-29. This groundbreaking book encourages readers to step back from problem solving to ask how global health is being problematized in the first place, why certain agendas and issue areas are prioritised and what determines the potential solutions put forth to address them. Global Collective Action Todd Sandler, 2004-07-19. This book examines how nations and other key participants in the global community address problems requiring collective action. The global community has achieved some successes such as eradicating smallpox but other efforts to coordinate nations' actions such as the reduction of drug trafficking have not been sufficient. This book identifies the factors that promote or inhibit successful collective action at the regional and global level for an ever growing set of challenges stemming from augmented cross border flows associated with globalization. Modern principles of collective action are identified and applied to a host of global challenges including promoting global health, providing foreign assistance, controlling rogue nations, limiting transnational terrorism and intervening in civil wars. Because many of these concerns involve strategic interactions where choices and consequences are dependent on one's own and others' actions, the book relies in places on elementary game theory that is fully introduced for the uninitiated reader.

Producer Services in China Anthony G. O. Yeh, Fiona F. Yang, 2013. This groundbreaking volume is one of the first to address questions related to the development of producer services in China. The contributions explore a wide range of associated topics including the characteristics of the growth of producer services and how this is related to China's economic and urban transition, the distribution of these services amongst Chinese cities as well as drawing comparison between producer service development in China and Western counterparts. The text also discusses the dynamics of the development of these services in China and how the political economic embeddedness of China has shaped the development of producer services. Finally, the consequences of this growth and how the economy and urban space have changed in response is explored as well as the challenges Chinese cities face in moving towards a service economy and how this can inform future public
