Unit 29 Manufacturing Planning:

Production Planning with Capacitated Resources and Congestion Hubert Missbauer, Reha Uzsoy, 2020-02-26 This book presents a comprehensive overview of recent developments in production planning. The monograph begins with an introductory chapter reviewing the need for these production planning models that operate by determining time-phased releases of work into the facility or supply chain, relating these to the Manufacturing Planning and Control (MPC) and Advanced Planning and Scheduling (APS) frameworks that form the basis of most academic research and industrial practice. The extensive body of work on Workload Control is also placed in this context and proves the need for improved models with a discussion of the difficulties these approaches encounter. The next two chapters present a detailed review of the state of the art in optimization models based on exogenous planned lead times and examines the cases where these can take both integer and fractional values. The difficulties arising in estimating planned lead times are consistent with factory behavior which are highlighted, noting that many of these lead to non-convex optimization models. Attempts to address these difficulties by iterative multimodel approaches that combine simulation and mathematical programming are also discussed in detail. The next three chapters of the volume address the set of techniques developed using clearing functions which represent the expected output of a resource in a planning period as a function of the expected workload of the resource during that period. The chapters on this subject propose a basic optimization model for multiple products, discuss the difficulties of this model and some possible solutions. It also reviews prior work and discusses a number of alternative formulations of the clearing function concept with their respective advantages and disadvantages. Applications to lot sizing decisions and a number of other specific problems are also described. This volume concludes with an assessment of the state of the art described in the volume and several directions for future work.

Encyclopedia of Production and Manufacturing Management Paul M. Swamidass, 2006-09-21 The Encyclopedia of Production and Manufacturing Management is an encyclopedia that has been developed to serve this field as the fundamental reference work. Over the past twenty years the field of production and operations management has grown more rapidly than ever and consequently its boundaries have been stretched in all directions. For example, in the last two decades production and manufacturing management absorbed in rapid succession several new production management concepts: manufacturing strategy, focused factory, just in time manufacturing, concurrent engineering, total quality management, supply chain management, flexible manufacturing systems, lean production and mass customization to name a few. This explosive growth makes the need for this volume abundantly clear. The manufacturing industry thinks and acts more broadly than it did several decades ago. The most notable change has been the need for manufacturing managers to think in technological, strategic and competitive terms. This is a very favorable development and it leads to manufacturing success The entries in this encyclopedia include the most recent technical and strategic innovations in production and manufacturing management The encyclopedia consists of articles of varying lengths The longer articles on important concepts and practices range from five to fifteen pages There are about 100 such articles written by nearly 100 authors from around the world In addition there are over 1000 shorter entries on concepts practices and principles The range of topics and depth of coverage is intended to suit both student and professional audiences The shorter entries provide digests of unfamiliar and complicated subjects Difficult subjects are made intelligible to the reader without oversimplification The strategic and technological perspectives on various topics give this Encyclopedia its distinctiveness and uniqueness The world of manufacturing today is increasingly competitive It is apparent that manufacturers must respond to these competitive pressures with technical and strategic innovation This encyclopedia has been developed to help researchers students and those in the manufacturing industry to understand and implement these ongoing changes in the field
