Evidence-based Assessment of the Scientific Research Literature on Reading and Its Implications for Reading Instruction : Reports of the Subgroups National Reading Panel (U.S.),2000 In 1997 Congress asked the Director of the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development NICHD in consultation with the Secretary of Education to convene a national panel to assess the status of research based knowledge including the effectiveness of various approaches to teaching children to read The panel was charged with providing a report that should present the panel s conclusions an indication of the readiness for application in the classroom of the results of this research and if appropriate a strategy for rapidly disseminating this information to facilitate effective reading instruction in the schools p 1 1 Grade Teacher ,1971 do to reading instruction has guided the selection of this book s content The second edition of this title originally published in 1990 has retained and elaborated upon the three major themes previously presented that reading is a linguistic process that motivation the affective domain may be as important in learning to read as the cognitive domain and that the reality of learning theory is to be found in the mechanisms of the brain where information is mediated and memory traces are stored The text integrates views from cognitive psychology psycholinguistics and neuropsychology as they relate to reading and writing A learning motivation model is provided to present associative learning conceptualization and self directed reading in a hierarchical relationship with distinct cognitive and affective components The distinction between beginning and proficient
