New Kid on the Block Alison

Mackinnon,2016-07-18 The reconstruction of higher education in Australia at the end of the 1980s radically reshaped many existing universities However in South Australia Dawkins s educational changes brought into existence an entirely new university the University of South Australia formed by the merging of two former institutions from the advanced education sector the South Australian Institute of Technology and the South Australian College of Advanced Education This volume first traces the unsuccessful path taken by those institutions to form partnerships with the two existing universities in South Australia Having been rejected by Flinders and the University of Adelaide respectively the two former colleges joined forces and began life as a new university in a new system of higher education Lacking research funding and access to higher degree students in its previous life the new university nevertheless had considerable strengths which suited the new system particularly in equity and links with business and the community The story of the University of South Australia is one of the most successful of the Dawkins changes After a shaky start its rapid rise to prominence in South Australia and beyond allows it to be truly seen as a new kid on the block in Australian higher education

Architecture, State Modernism and Cultural Nationalism in the Apartheid Capital Hilton Judin, 2021-04-07 This book is the first comprehensive investigation of the architecture of the apartheid state in the period of rapid economic growth and political repression from 1957 to 1966 when buildings took on an ideological role that was never remote from the increasingly dominant administrative legislative and policing mechanisms of the regime It considers how this process reflected the usurpation of a regional modernism and looks to contribute to wider discourses on international postwar modernism in architecture Buildings in Pretoria that came to embody ambitions of the apartheid state for industrialisation and progress serve as case studies These were widely acclaimed projects that embodied for apartheid officials the pursuit of modernisation but carried latent apprehensions of Afrikaners about their growing economic prospects and cultural estrangement in Africa It is a less known and marginal story due to the dearth of material and documents buried in archives and untranslated documents Many of the documents drawings and photographs in the book are unpublished and include classified material and photographs from the National Nuclear Research Centre negatives of 1960s from Pretoria News and documents and pamphlets from Afrikaner Broederbond archives State architecture became the most iconic public manifestation of an evolving expression of white cultural identity as a new generation of architects in Pretoria took up the challenge of finding form to their prospects and beliefs It was an opportunistic faith in Afrikaners who urgently needed to entrench their vulnerable and contested position on the African continent The shift from provincial town to apartheid capital was swift and relentless Little was left to stand in the way of the ambitions and aim of the state as people were uprooted and forcibly relocated structures torn down and block upon block of administration towers and slabs erected across Pretoria This book will be of great interest to students and scholars of architectural history as well as those with an interest in postcolonial studies political science and social anthropology
