Imperialism & the Progressive Era COMPLETE UNIT GUIDE PACKET

OVERVIEW

Imperialism is the policy of extending a country's power and influence through the acquisition of territory and the establishment of economic and political control over other countries. The Progressive Era was a period of reform in the United States that lasted from the 1890s to the 1920s. It was a time when people wanted to make the government and society better. One of the main goals of the Progressive Era was to stop imperialism.

The main arguments for imperialism were that it would bring civilization to the "backward" peoples of the world, that it would provide a market for American goods, and that it would provide a source of raw materials for American industry. The main arguments against imperialism were that it was expensive, that it was a waste of time and energy, and that it was a violation of American principles.

In the early 1890s, many people in the United States were in favor of imperialism. They believed that it would bring civilization to the "backward" peoples of the world, that it would provide a market for American goods, and that it would provide a source of raw materials for American industry. The main arguments against imperialism were that it was expensive, that it was a waste of time and energy, and that it was a violation of American principles.
