Window on the East Robert Geraci,2018-10-18 Robert Geraci presents an exceptionally original account of both the politics and the lived experience of diversity in a society whose ethnic complexity has long been downplayed For centuries Russians have defined their country as both a multinational empire and a homogeneous nation state in the making and have alternately embraced and repudiated the East or Asia as fundamental to Russia s identity The author argues that the city of Kazan in the middle Volga region was the chief nineteenth century site for mediating this troubled and paradoxical relationship with the East much as St Petersburg had served as Russia s window on Europe a century earlier He shows how Russians sought through science religion pedagogy and politics to understand and promote the Russification of ethnic minorities in the East as well as to define themselves Vivid in narrative detail meticulously argued and peopled by a colorful cast including missionaries bishops peasants mullahs professors teachers students linguists orientalist archeologists and state officials Window on the East uses previously untapped archival and published materials to describe the creation sometimes intentional sometimes unintentional of intermediate and new forms of Russianness Educational and Social

in isolation and not shared across disciplines This volume explores empirical and theoretical challenges across these areas and the subsequent methodologies implemented to address them and how they might be mutually applied across translation and interpreting studies but also brought together toward a coherent empirical theory of translation and interpreting studies Organized around three key themes target text orientedness source text orientedness and translator interpreter orientedness the book takes stock of both studies of translation and interpreting corpora and processes in an effort to answer such key questions including how do written translation and interpreting relate to each other How do technological advances in these fields shape process and product What would an empirical theory of translation and interpreting studies look like Taken together the collection showcases the possibilities of further dialogue around methodological practices in translation and interpreting studies and will be of interest to students and scholars in these fields
