

End Stage Report

1. Purpose

An End Stage Report is used to give a summary of progress to date, the overall project situation, and sufficient information to ask for a Project Board decision on what to do next with the project.

The Project Board uses the information in the End Stage Report in tandem with the next Stage Plan to decide what action to take with the project: for example, authorize the next stage, amend the project scope, or stop the project.

(Where the End Stage Report is being produced at the end of the initiation stage, not all of the content may be appropriate or necessary).

2. Derivation

The End Stage Report may be derived from the following:-

- Current Stage Plan and actuals
- Project Plan
- Benefits Review Plan
- Risk Register, Quality Register and Issue Register
- Exception Report (if applicable)
- Lessons Report
- Completed/slipped Work Packages
- Updated Business Case

3. Quality criteria

What makes a excellent End Stage Report

- The report clearly shows stage performance against the plan
- Any abnormal situations are described, together with their impact
- Any appointed Project Assurance roles agree with the report
