Wyoming: A Story of the Outdoor West Edward Sylvester Ellis,William MacLeod Raine, An automobile shot out from a gash in the hills and slipped swiftly down to the butte Here it came to a halt on the white dusty road while its occupant gazed with eager unsated eyes on the great panorama that stretched before her The earth rolled in waves like a mighty sea to the

distant horizon line From a wonderful blue sky poured down upon the land a bath of sunbeats The air was like wine pure and strong and above the desert swam the rare untempered light of Wyoming Surely here was a peace primeval a silence unbroken since the birth of creation It was all new to her and wonderfully exhilarating The infinite roll of plain the distant shining mountains the multitudinous voices of the desert drowned in a sunlit sea of space they were all details of the situation that ministered to a large serenity And while she breathed deeply the satisfaction of it an exploding rifle echo shattered the stillness With excited sputtering came the prompt answer of a fusillade She was new to the West but some instinct stronger than reason told the girl that here was no playful puncher shooting up the scenery to ventilate his exuberance Her imagination conceived something more deadly a sinister picture of men pumping lead in a grim close lipped silence a lusty plainsman with murder in his heart crumpling into a lifeless heap while the thin smoke spiral curled from his hot rifle So the girl imagined the scene as she ran swiftly forward through the pines to the edge of the butte bluff whence she might look down upon the coulee that nestled against it Nor had she greatly erred for her first sweeping glance showed her the thing she had dreaded In a semicircle well back from the foot of the butte half a dozen men crouched in the cover of the sage brush and a scattered group of cottonwoods They were perhaps fifty yards apart and the attention of all of them was focused on a spot directly beneath her Even as she looked in that first swift moment of apprehension a spurt of smoke came from one of the rifles and was flung back from the forked pine at the bottom of the mesa She saw him then kneeling behind his insufficient shelter a trapped man making his last stand From where she stood the girl distinguished him very clearly and under the field glasses that she turned on him the details leaped to life Tall strong slender with the lean clean build of a greyhound he seemed as wary and alert as a panther The broad soft hat the scarlet handkerchief loosely knotted about his throat the gray shirt spurs and overalls proclaimed him a stockman just as his dead horse at the entrance to the coulee told of an accidental meeting in the desert and a hurried run for cover That he had no chance was quite plain but no plainer than the cool vigilance with which he proposed to make them pay Even in the matter of defense he was worse off than they were but he knew how to make the most of what he had knew how to avail himself of every inch of sagebrush that helped to render him indistinct to their eyes One of the attackers eager for a clearer shot exposed himself a trifle too far in taking aim Without any loss of time in sighting swift as a lightning flash the rifle behind the forked pine spoke That the bullet reached its mark she saw with a gasp of dismay For the man suddenly huddled down and rolled over on his side His comrades appeared to take warning by this example The men at both ends of the crescent fell back and for a minute the girl's heart leaped with the hope that they were about to abandon the siege Apparently the man in the scarlet kerchief had no such expectation He deserted his position behind the pine and ran back crouching low in the brush to another little clump of trees closer to the bluff The reason for this was at first not apparent to her but she understood presently when the men who had fallen back behind the rolling hillocks appeared again well in to the edge of the bluff Only by his timely retreat had the man saved himself from being outflanked The Phoenix and the Falcon Katherine Gibson Newcomer,2014-10-25 The Phoenix and the Falcon is a romance despite the harshness of its setting Helena and Valamir come together in a maelstrom of destruction as Attila the Hun sweeps across the steppes of Russia Attilas cousin shatters Helenas life through violence The depth of her loss awakens a sinister ancestral ability Yet Valamir an Ostrogoth allied to Attila rekindles in Helena the possibility of life and even love Still she remains at war within herself Despite her growing feelings for Valamir she remains trapped by her grief and her thirst for closure through revenge Filled with action this novel combines sexual tension with a clash between the forces of light and dark as Helena struggles for the courage to return to the world of the living The Greatest Children's Classics of All Time - Ultimate Collection: 1400+ Titles in One Book Beatrix Potter,E.
