Southwestern Oregon Community College, 1000 W. Main Street, Medford, OR 97504

2. Research Objectives

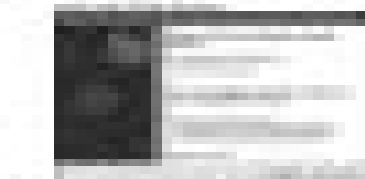

- To identify the current health status of the community.
- To assess the impact of climate change on the health and well-being of the community.
- To develop a plan of action to address the identified health issues.
- To monitor and evaluate the effectiveness of the plan of action.

3. Research Methodology

3.1 Data Collection

The data will be collected through a combination of primary and secondary sources.

The primary data will be collected through a series of interviews and focus groups with community members. The secondary data will be collected through a review of existing literature and reports.

3.2 Data Analysis

- The data will be analyzed using a combination of qualitative and quantitative methods.
- The qualitative methods will include content analysis and thematic analysis.
- The quantitative methods will include statistical analysis.
- The results of the analysis will be used to develop a plan of action to address the identified health issues.

4. Results

- The study found that the community is currently experiencing a range of health issues, including respiratory problems, water quality issues, and food security issues.
- The study also found that climate change is having a significant impact on the health and well-being of the community.
- Based on the findings, a plan of action was developed to address the identified health issues.
- The plan of action includes a range of measures, including improving air quality, protecting water resources, and promoting food security.

The study concludes that climate change is a significant threat to the health and well-being of the community. It is essential that we take action to address the identified health issues and to protect the community from the impacts of climate change.
