Testing Aircraft, Exploring Space Roger E. Bilstein,2003 Selected by Choice Magazine as an Outstanding Academic Title for 2003 The National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics forerunner of today's NASA emerged in 1915 when airplanes were curiosities made of wood and canvas and held together with yards of baling wire. At the time an unusual example of government intrusion and foresight given the importance of aviation to national military concerns, the committee oversaw the development of wind tunnels, metal fabrication, propeller design, and powerful new high speed aircraft during the 1920s and 30s. In this richly illustrated account, acclaimed historian of aviation Roger E. Bilstein combines the story of NACA and NASA to provide a fresh look at the agencies, the problems they faced, and the hard work as well as inventive genius of the men and women who found the solutions. NACA research during World War II led to critical advances in U.S. fighter and bomber design, and Bilstein explains contributed to engineering standards for helicopters. After 1945, the agency's test pilots experimented with jet powered aircraft, testing both human and technical limits in trying to break the so-called sound barrier. In October 1958, when the launch of the Soviet Sputnik signaled the beginning of the space race, NACA formed the nucleus of the new National Aeronautics and Space Agency. The new agency's efforts to meet President Kennedy's challenge of safely landing a man on the Moon and returning him to Earth before the end of the 1960s is one of the great adventure stories of all time. Bilstein goes on to describe NASA's recent planetary and extraplanetary exploration as well as its less well-known research into the future of aeronautical design.

Military Neuropsychology Carrie Kennedy, Jeffrey Moore, 2010-03-15. This foundational volume on military neuropsychology should be on the bookshelf of every mental health clinician that may come in contact with military service members. International Journal of Emergency Mental Health, an important text dedicated to this subspecialty in the larger field of neuropsychology.
