Tolkienian inspired genre drawing on myth's world creating power and YA's liminal potential disrupt the conventional heroic narrative. These heroes such as Tamora Pierce's Alanna the Lioness, Daine the Wildmage, and Marissa Meyer's Cinder and Iko offer a model of being hero: an embodied way of living and being in this world that disrupts the typical hero's violent hierarchy, isolating individuality and erasure of difference. In doing so, they push the boundaries of what it means to be a hero: a girl and even human.

Gender Bias in Mystery and Romance Novel Publishing Anna Faktorovich, 2015-04-27 Examines gender bias from the perspective of readers, writers, and publishers with a focus on the top two bestselling genres in modern fiction. It is a linguistic, literary, stylistic, and structurally formalist analysis of the male and female sentences in the genres that have the greatest gender divide: romances and mysteries. The analysis will search for the historical roots that solidified what many think of today as a natural division. Virginia Woolf called it the fabricated feminine sentence, and other linguists have also identified clear sexpreferential differences in Anglo-American, Swedish, and French novels. Do female mystery writers adopt a masculine voice when they write mysteries? Are female-penned mysteries structurally or linguistically different from their male competitors and vice versa among male romance writers? The first part can be used as a textbook for gender stylistics as it provides an in-depth review of prior research. The second part is an analysis of the results of a survey on readers' perception of gender in passages from literature. The last part is a linguistic and structural analysis of actual statistical differences between the novels in the two genres, considering the impact of the author's gender.
