In 1791 the family relocated to the countryside town of Steinau during Philipp's work there as a district magistrate Amtmann. The household started to be prominent members of the neighborhood residing in a big house surrounded by areas. Biographer Jack Zipes writes the brothers have been satisfied in Steinau and clearly fond of country life. The kids had been educated at home by private tutors receiving tough instruction as Lutherans that impressed in each a long term religious faith. Later they went to local schools.
